According to the Pew Research Center, students today put technology into the same category as "air and water." In short, they believe: "I must have it to survive." The same report reveals that college students would rather give up their "pinky finger" than their cell phone. Wow. That's quite a trade-off, don't you think? What's more, teens interact with romantic partners "most digitally" and 31 percent have been the recipient of a boyfriend/girlfriend "breaking up with them in a text."
